Note on special holiday: We inform you that Sunday, June 24 is a special holiday in Catalonia due to the celebration of Saint John's day (Sant Joan). The big event happens actually the night before and the tradition calls for firecrackers, bonfires, all-night parties called "Revetlles", "coca" which is a sweet bread/pastry topped or filled with different options of fruits, nuts or creams, and which may be accompanied with sweet wine or "cava" (Catalan champagne).

The origin of the festivity is the celebration of the summer solstice for that night is one of the shortest nights of the year. Witches and ghosts come out and you are supposed to drive them away by throwing firecrackers or building bonfires. Nowadays, fire prevention regulations allow bonfires only in authorised locations.
