

Dynamics on and of complex networks

Albert Diaz-Guilera, Universitat de Barcelona

In this set of lectures I will focus on two particular dynamical aspects of complex networks.

First, about properties of dynamical process on static networks, including networks that are hierarchically organized.

Second, about generation of networks based on some local constraints, as can be the case of origin-destination networks with applications to human mobility data, by using techniques derived from statistical physics.