

Intermittency and compatibility in martensitic transformations

Detection of events in bi-dimensional maps allows the characterization of intermittency in various kinds of martensitic material.

Particular attention is paid to the comparison between materials which satisfy compatibility conditions and classical incompatible materials.